☀️ 25°C - 27°C, CLOUDY SKY, FRESH BREEZE. | TONIGHT'S DRESS CODE: SMART CASUAL | SUNRISE: 6.20AM | SUNSET: 5.35PM

🌀 From the Bridge

Today we are still steaming north towards Alotau. Yesterday we told you what we measure speed at sea by, the knot. But do you know how the knot got its name? The term comes from the days of old sail ships, when sailors would tie knots in a rope and space them apart at intervals of 14.3m, a log would then be attached to the end and thrown overboard. As the ships moved forward, the sailor would count how many of the knots passed through his hand in 28 seconds. After the 28 seconds, he could count the total number of knots that had passed by and determine how many knots, or nautical miles per hour the ship was travelling at.
